

CRUSHED SHELL FOR LANDSCAPING & GARDENS

Tough and attractive, our crushed shell is sourced from dead shell deposits from the seafloor and includes cockle, scallop and whelk shells.

Many of the shells retain their natural colours (reds, oranges, mauves) and are stronger and more durable compared to shell sourced from older deposits.

This product can be used for pathways and as an ornamental garden surfacing material. It is also a well suited and popular material for surfacing petanque courts.

The white shell contrasts well with darker colours and can be used to lighten or highlight areas reflecting natural or artificial light for impact and emphasis during the day or at night.

Used with artificial lighting to great effect at night. The white shell is an attractive way to emphasise paths, borders, steps and other garden objects.

Even without artificial lighting shell can assist you in navigating the garden more safely at night by improving the visibility of objects and hazards.

Crushed shell 5 - 13mm is available from McCallum Bros. Ltd. through our distributors.
